ACADEMIC TRADITIONS

THE ACADEMIC PROCESSION

The Mace: Today's academic procession traces its origin to universities of medieval Europe. The traditional mace formerly served a useful purpose as an instrument to disperse crowds of small boys and dogs that cluttered the line of march and to maintain order in unruly gatherings.

The mace evolved over time into a symbol of rulership associated with the pride of a nation's origin. Later it was adopted by universities as a symbol of the power of the academic pursuit of truth and wisdom. Carried during academic processions, the mace brings authority to ceremonial occasions symbolizing the unity of the collegiate community. The mace used today is a cross sculpted of cherry wood to represent the University's mission with the seal at its center to symbolize Christ at the core of Concordia-Chicago.

The Gonfalons: Once used to identify households, neighborhoods or districts in medieval times, these flags have held significant use in religious ceremonies throughout history. Today they bear the names and colors of the primary disciplines of each of the University's four colleges.

THE ACADEMIC REGALIA

The Gown: The flowing gown comes from the 12th century. While originally it may have been worn as protection against the cold of unheated buildings, today it has become symbolic of the democracy of scholarship, for it covers any dress of rank or social standing. Typically black for all degrees, the gown has pointed sleeves for bachelor's degrees, long closed sleeves with a slit at the arm or wrist for master's degrees, and full-bell, double sleeves for doctoral degrees. Bachelor's and master's degree gowns have no trimming. The gown for the doctoral degree is faced down the front with velvet and has three bars of velvet across the sleeves, in the color distinctive of the faculty, institution or discipline to which the degree pertains. Some gowns for doctoral degrees are in a color distinctive to the degree-granting institution.

The Cap: When Roman law freed the slave, he won the privilege of wearing a cap. The academic cap is a sign of freedom of scholarship and the responsibility and dignity with which scholarship endows the wearer. Old poetry records the cap of scholarship as square to symbolize the book. Doctoral caps may be four, six or eight-sided and are most often made of velvet. The color of the tassel for bachelor's degrees denotes the discipline. The tassel for the master's degree is black; the tassel for those holding a doctoral degree may be gold or the color corresponding to the hood.

The Hood: The hood is trimmed with one or more chevrons of a secondary color on the background of the primary color of the college. The color of the facing of the hood denotes the discipline represented by the degree; the color of the lining designates the university or college from which the degree was granted.

The colors associated with the different disciplines awarded at Concordia University Chicago are:

Business: Drab
Communication: Crimson
Education: Light Blue
Fine Arts: Brown
Law: Purple
Letters, Humanities: White
Music: Pink
Philosophy, Political Science: Dark Blue
Physical Education, Sports Leadership: Sage Green
Psychology: Gold
Science: Golden Yellow
Social Work, Sociology: Citron
Theology: Scarlet

ABOUT CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY CHICAGO

Concordia University Chicago, a university of the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod (LCMS), traces its beginnings to 1864, when Addison Teachers Seminary was dedicated and classes were begun in a three-story building in Addison, IL. Designed to educate men to become Lutheran school teachers, the seminary was chartered by Zion Lutheran Church in Addison (now in Bensenville, IL).

Shortly after the turn of the previous century, the expanding seminary had outgrown its Addison campus, and on October 12, 1913 a new facility named Concordia Teachers College in the University's present River Forest location was dedicated before crowds of more than 30,000 people.

In 1938, Concordia became a coeducational institution and, in 1957, Concordia's first graduate program in education was established. By the early 1970s, the single-purpose institution expanded its mission of educating teachers and graduates for church professions by adding a liberal arts program.

To reflect its broadened range of programs, the institution's name was changed from Concordia Teachers College to Concordia College in 1979. As more graduate programs and liberal arts majors continued to be added, the college changed its name in 1990 to Concordia University. In 2006, the University officially became known as Concordia University Chicago, reinforcing the University's presence and programs in the greater Chicagoland area and providing recognition regionally, nationally and globally.

True to its heritage, Concordia-Chicago continues to be a leader in educating teachers both for the Church and for the world. Concordia-Chicago is among those private colleges in Illinois that graduate the largest number of educators annually. The University's College of Business, College of Education, College of Health, Science & Technology, and College of Theology, Arts &

Humanities offer concentrations in a wide variety of fields at the bachelor's, master's and doctoral levels. Professional learners also benefit from various accelerated degree offerings relevant to today's employment landscape.

For more than a decade, combined graduate and undergraduate enrollment has exceeded 5,000 students. The University now enrolls more than 1,000 doctoral students and more than 300 international students.

Since 2010, Concordia University Chicago has been named as a College of Distinction and a Christian College of Distinction in recognition of outstanding student engagement, teaching and academic excellence in undergraduate education. The University is now recognized as a Hispanic Serving Institution. In addition, a number of faculty members have been named Fulbright Scholars and taken part in the related international exchange. The prestigious Golden Apple Foundation has recognized more than 30 College of Education students as part of its scholars program, and 22 alumni have received Golden Apple Teacher Awards for their exemplary work in the classroom.

In 2019, Dr. Russell Dawn was installed as the institution's 12th president. Today, he leads the University under the primary tenets of truth, freedom and vocation. To date, more than 43,000 graduates form the long line of maroon and gold alumni. With deep roots in the LCMS, vocation, faith and service remain the foundation of a Concordia University Chicago education today.
